Mr. Robert D. Calkins
President, The Brookings Institution
722 Jackson Place, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Mr. Calkins:

The Director of Central Intelligence has asked me to reply to your letter of 10 January 1958 in which you invite the nomination of members of this Agency to participate in the second Brookings Executive Conference.

We wish again to nominate Mr. [redacted]

[redacted] as this Agency's representative. He is well qualified to participate constructively in the Conference proceedings, and I am sure that, if he is selected, the experience will be to his and the Agency's benefit. I am sending to Mr. William T. McDonald, Director of the Executive Conference Program, a resume of Mr. [redacted] background and experience.

Please accept our thanks for the information you have sent us concerning the Conference Program, and for inviting us again to participate in it.

Sincerely,

Signed
L. K. White
Deputy Director

The Honorable
Allen W. Dulles
Director of the Central Intelligence Agency

My dear Mr. Dulles:

In October of last year, I wrote to you concerning The Brookings Institution's Conference Program for Executives in the Federal Service, inviting you to nominate key officials from the Central Intelligence Agency for participation in our first Conference. We appreciated your nomination of Mr. [REDACTED] and regretted that it was not possible to include him in our first group.

Plans are now being laid for a second Conference, which will be similar to the first, to be held from March 16 through 28 in Williamsburg, Virginia. We would again like to invite you to submit nominations for this Conference. If you would like us to again consider Mr. Freeman, we would appreciate knowing this before we make our selections.

As you may recall, representatives of both civilian and military agencies are selected to participate. The total number of executives selected will be around twenty. Nominees should be mature individuals who are accustomed to responsibility, so that they may contribute to discussions as well as learn from them. They should be persons whom you regard as definitely successful, yet, who are at the same time capable of further development. They should be persons in your agency who are frequently suggested for difficult assignments and who can be released from current work for a two-week period only with some hardship.

Nominations may be made by writing to Mr. William T. McDonald, Director of the Executive Conference Program. They should be submitted before January 31, 1958. For each person nominated, we would appreciate receiving a brief resume of his background, including his age, education, career record, awards and distinctions, and prior participation in conferences, meetings, or other related activities concerned with public management.

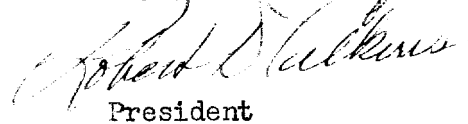

The Honorable
Allen W. Dulles
